

DEPRECATES PLAN FOR U. S. DEFENSE

Means That Other Nations Will Have to Keep Pace Along Same Line.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—(U. P. 11:10 p. m.) "I know nothing more disheartening than the announcement recently made that the United States—the one great country left in the world free from the hideous bloody burden of war—is about to embark upon the building of a huge armada destined to be equal or second to our own," said Lord Rothesay, presiding at the Rhodes lecture in the University of London tonight.

"It means," he added, "that the burden will continue upon the other nations and be increased exactly in proportion to the fleet of the United States. I confess that it is a disheartening prospect that the United States should voluntarily in these days take up the burden which after this war will be found to have broken or almost broken our backs."

Lord Rothesay, said Lord Rothesay, was disheartening never to return in its present shape, on the conclusion of the war the form it would assume, he thought would be unlike anything with which the world had grown familiar. One obvious aspect of this transition was that in the future it would be quite impossible to make treaty arrangements between the great powers without first obtaining some likely guarantee of their observance.

The signature of Germany to a document of any kind, he said, would have little value within any measurable time. It was likewise true that this observation would have to be generally applied beyond the limits of the cause no nation could feel itself safe which obtained the price of peace on anything but some material guarantee of its own. This ultimately meant force.

ADMIRAL FISHER ANSWERS ATTACK

LONDON, Nov. 16.—(U. P. 11:10 p. m.)—Admiral Lord Fisher, the former first sea lord of the admiralty, made a brief but striking answer in the house of lords today to Winston Churchill's statement in the house of commons yesterday in which Mr. Churchill complained that he had not received from Admiral Fisher, with respect to the Dardanelles attack, the clear guidance before or the firm support after, to which he was entitled. "Certain references," said Lord Fisher, "were made to me in the speech delivered yesterday by Mr. Churchill. I have been 83 years in the service of my country and I have never in my life been so unfairly treated as I am being treated today. The prime minister said that Mr. Churchill had said one or two things he would better not have said, and had necessarily and naturally left unsaid some things which would have to be said if I am not to be left in the air. It is not fitting to make personal explanations affecting national interests when my country is in the midst of a great war."

It is his opinion that an explosion of dynamite wrecked the building. Each said he had examined the ruins shortly after the explosion.

A Sad Blow.
"Well, how did your father come out in the primaries?"

"Crooked me," he said. "I answered the primary and lost. We were fighting to get $2.50 votes and the other side came in at $5.00. I was a lucky fellow to get out."

Officers at Bridge While Troops Fight

LONDON, Nov. 16.—(U. P. 11:10 p. m.)—Charges of incompetency and neglect of their work were brought against the British staff in Paris by Baron St. Bavin in the house of lords this evening when he asked the government whether the attention had been called to the reports alleging that they had been guilty of negligence as to fatalities of the staff work.

Play Bridge at Night

The people were sending their sons out to fight under the direction of men who, he declared, were having at headquarters in great numbers and could not get away to their work in the day. They were up late playing bridge.

"It is a great time," said Lord St. Bavin, "that the men were given a fair chance. More than once the troops have been the victims of the staff work. It is a great time that the staff work has been so thoroughly exposed."

Up at 4 in the Morning.

Lord St. Bavin declared that Lord St. Bavin had launched his attack without adequate information. "It is true," he said, "that the country has suffered owing to the want of an organized general staff. Nevertheless, there has been evolved a general staff of the highest order. To say that the work of the staff is a failure is to say something which is very far from the truth. As for Field Marshal French he is up at 4 o'clock in the morning."

"A GAMBLING HOUSE" INSTEAD OF A BANK

MORRIS, Ill., Nov. 16.—The word "bank" was explained for the hundredth time today when the La Salle Street Trust and Savings bank was charged, charged Frank H. Hayes of Chicago, for the state in his arguments to the jury that is trying C. B. Mumford, former vice-president of the bank which he is charged with conspiring to wreck.

"Mumford capitalized the name 'Bank' for $100,000 when he obtained the money with which he paid for his stock when the La Salle Street National bank was opened," he said. "They argue that Mumford has been persecuted," he continued. "A clean man and a clean bank has nothing to fear at the hands of the newspapers. It is the man who is working in the dark who fears publicity."
